| 2018-Present | Endowed Chair Professor and Director of Prostate Cancer Research at Department of Pathology, Duke University School of Medicine |

Research Interests

The research focus in my lab is to dissect the roles of ubiquitination pathways and metabolism in cancer progression, metastasis, cancer stem cell regulation and cancer immunity using biochemical and molecular biology approaches along with genetic mouse models. The ultimate goals are to gain better understanding the biology of cancer and to develop small molecule inhibitors for cancer therapy.

Major Honors and Awards

- | | |
|------|--|
| 1999 | Gordon research travel award |
| 2000 | The GSS travel award with Honorable Mention for Outstanding from the University of Rochester |
